Campus Moves To Conserve Energy

UCSF is instituting a campus-community energy program to develop ways of ensuring effective operation of the UCSF physical plant while also containing costs. Five years ago, energy at UCSF — natural gas, oil, electricity and water — cost about $700,000 a year. Costs have risen to approximately $3,200,000 for 1977-78 even though there was a 10% decrease in campus consumption of energy during this period.

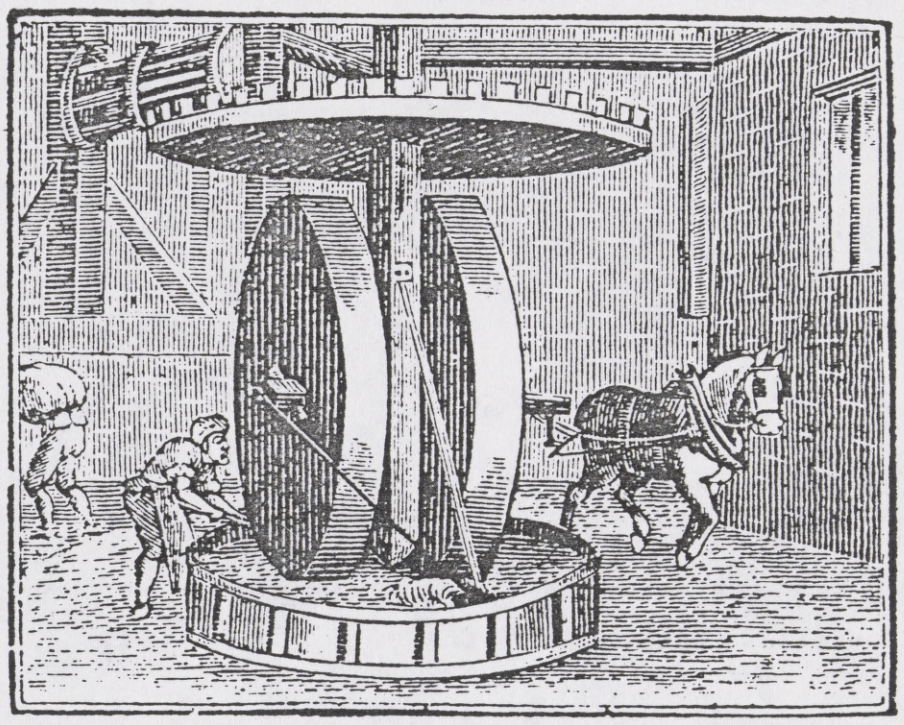
The UCSF Energy Conservation Committee is chaired by Harvey Patt, director of the Radiobiology Laboratory. Representatives from the community include Gloria Vollmayer, president of the Haight-Ashbury Improvement Association, and Evelyn Wilson, president of SPEAK (Sunset-Parkside Education and Action Committee). The UCSF Committee will hold public meetings in major campus buildings to discuss conservation measures and hopes to have a representative from each building to help coordinate and implement the measures. The purpose of the meetings is to help building occupants develop awareness and commitment to ways of conserving energy.

Country's First Health Policy Center

The Health Policy Program of UCSF has been singled out from national competition to receive a unique two-million dollar, five-year grant by the National Center for Health Services Research (NCHSR), which has designated the UCSF program as the country's first "Health Policy Analysis Research Center."

Since its inception in 1972, the Health Policy Program has had four major goals: to identify major health policy issues; to provide government officials with technical assistance; to disseminate research findings to policy makers, professionals, and the public; and to educate and train students and faculty in the health professions.

The new grant from NCHSR will be used to expand the program, which plans to add two economists and a senior staff member to give technical assistance and work with outside groups.



Proposed Uses of Poly High

Representatives of UCSF have been meeting with staff of the S.F. Unified School District and with members of the "Poly Coalition," as well as with various faculty and administrative groups on the campus, to discuss possible uses of sections of Poly High School, which has been declared surplus by the School Board.

The "Poly Coalition" consists of representatives of a number of neighborhood groups and programs who would like to make use of the Poly High School buildings as a multi-purpose community center. Both the school district and representatives of the Poly Coalition have asked the university to participate in planning uses of the site.

To this end, the UCSF campus has prepared a preliminary listing of a number of programs which could occupy space at Poly High, many of which would be of benefit both to the campus and to the community.

Among these, the programs which have highest priority, and for which immediate funding appears to be feasible, include the Langley Porter Institute High School for emotionally disturbed teenagers, now located in temporary quarters at the US Public Health Services Hospital. Another would be a special school for pregnant students. Both of these programs involve participation by the S.F. Unified School District.

Two others of direct use to the community would be a proposed Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation Training Program and "Outdoors Unlimited," a campus program already widely utilized by the neighborhood, which provides programs and equipment for a variety of sports and outdoor recreational activities.

According to Chancellor Francis A. Sooy, these programs could be initiated at Poly almost immediately, if the facility's seismic safety, maintenance, heat, light, security and janitorial services are found to meet appropriate codes and standards.

"It is our understanding that the Poly Coalition would like to gain cooperation of one or several large lessors in order to raise sufficient funds to keep the Poly buildings open and operating," Chancellor Sooy declared.

"For our part, we are anxious to cooperate with the community on mutual projects which would be of benefit to both the university and the neighborhood. The campus has limited authority to enter into lease arrangements on its own. I am willing to proceed now with the above mentioned programs, which added together will meet this limitation."
